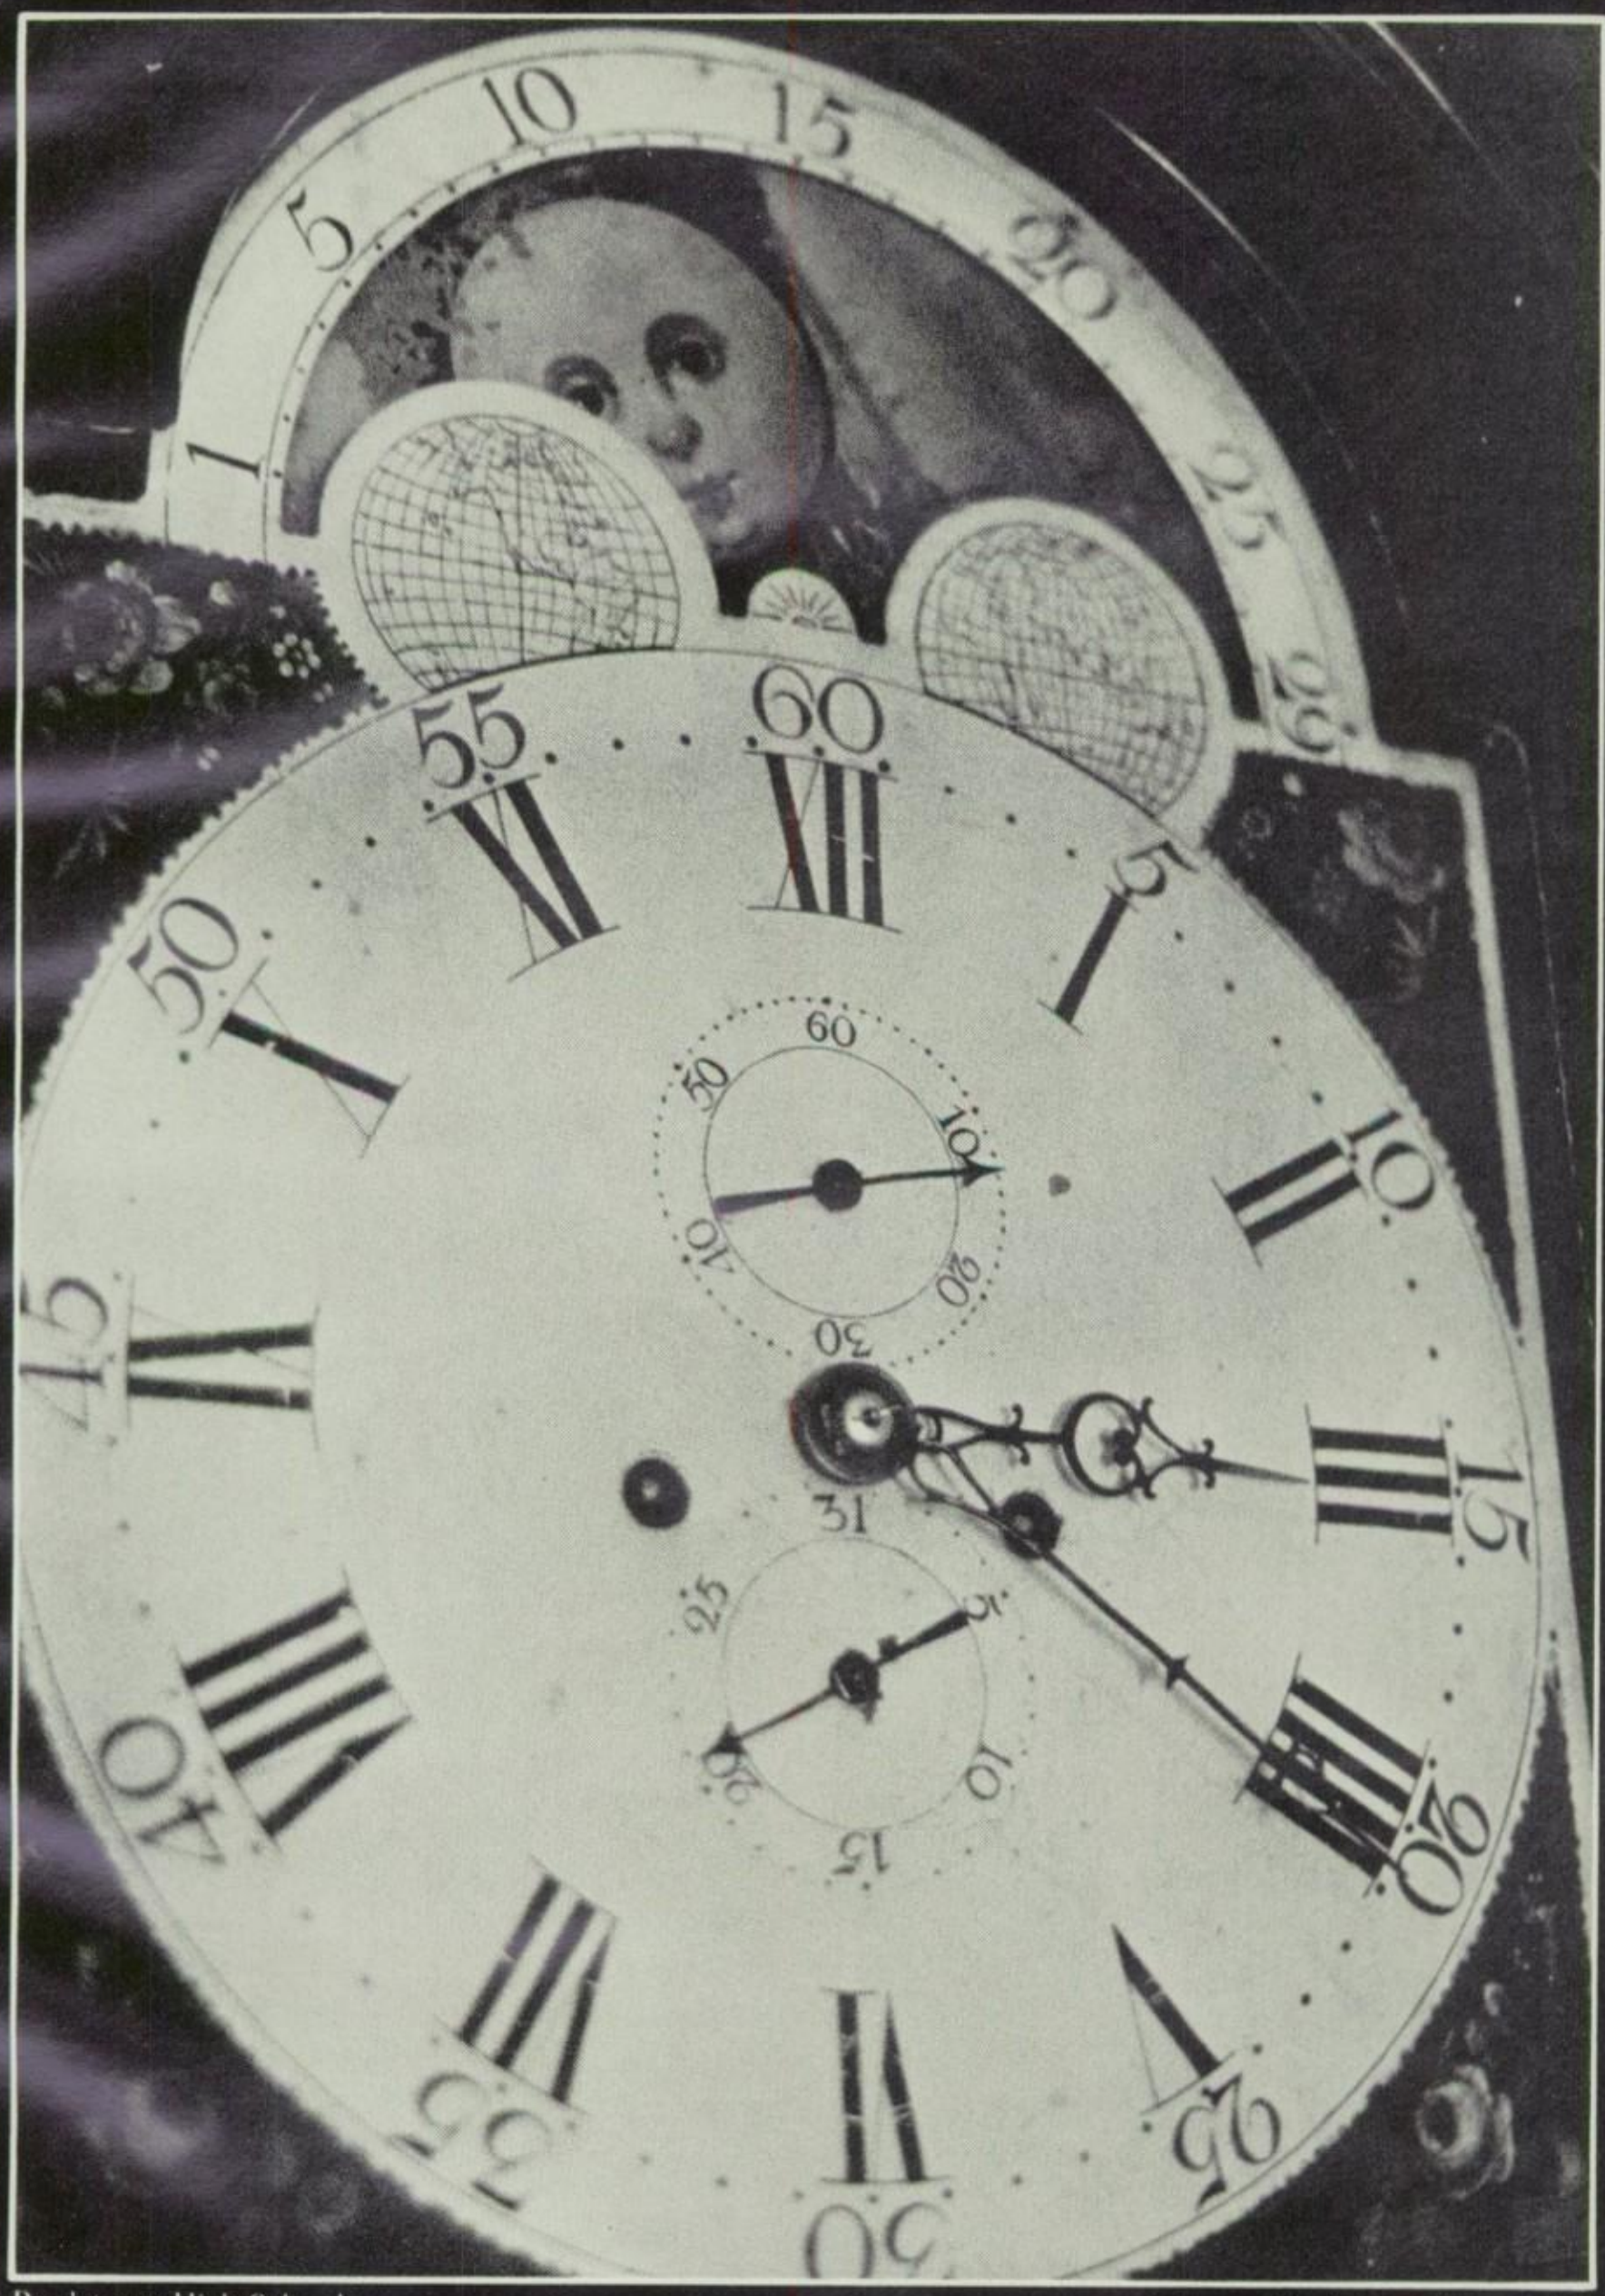
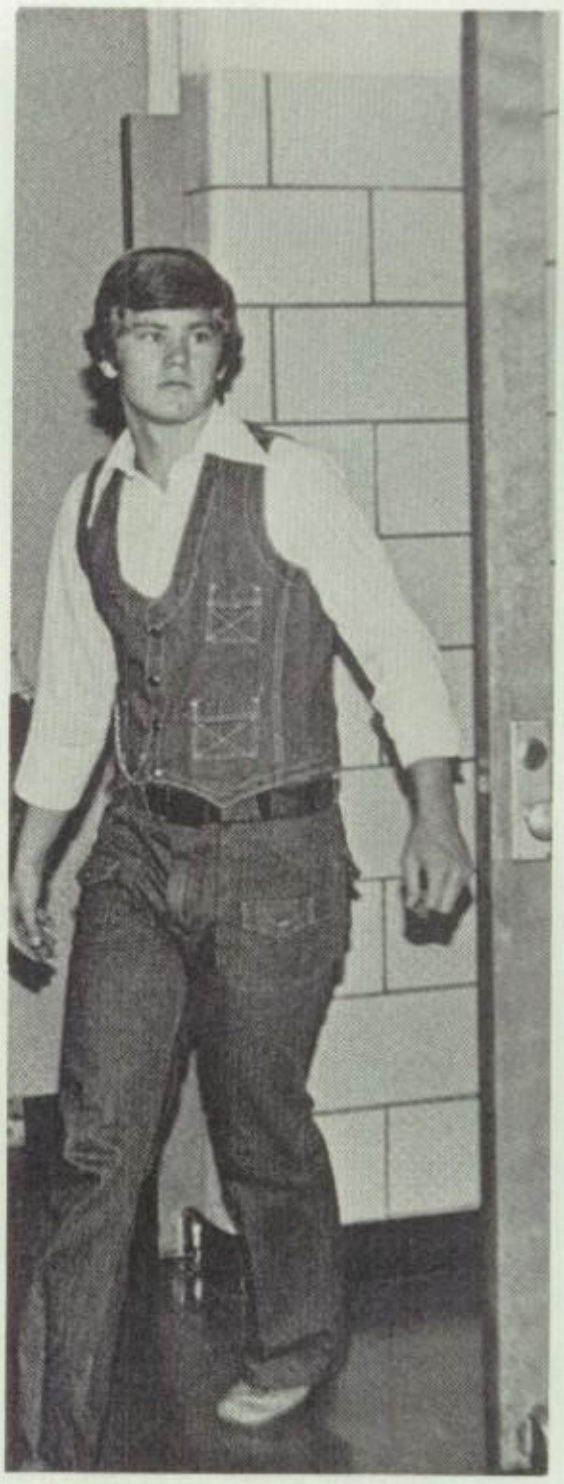
Dimensions in Time



Bardstown High School

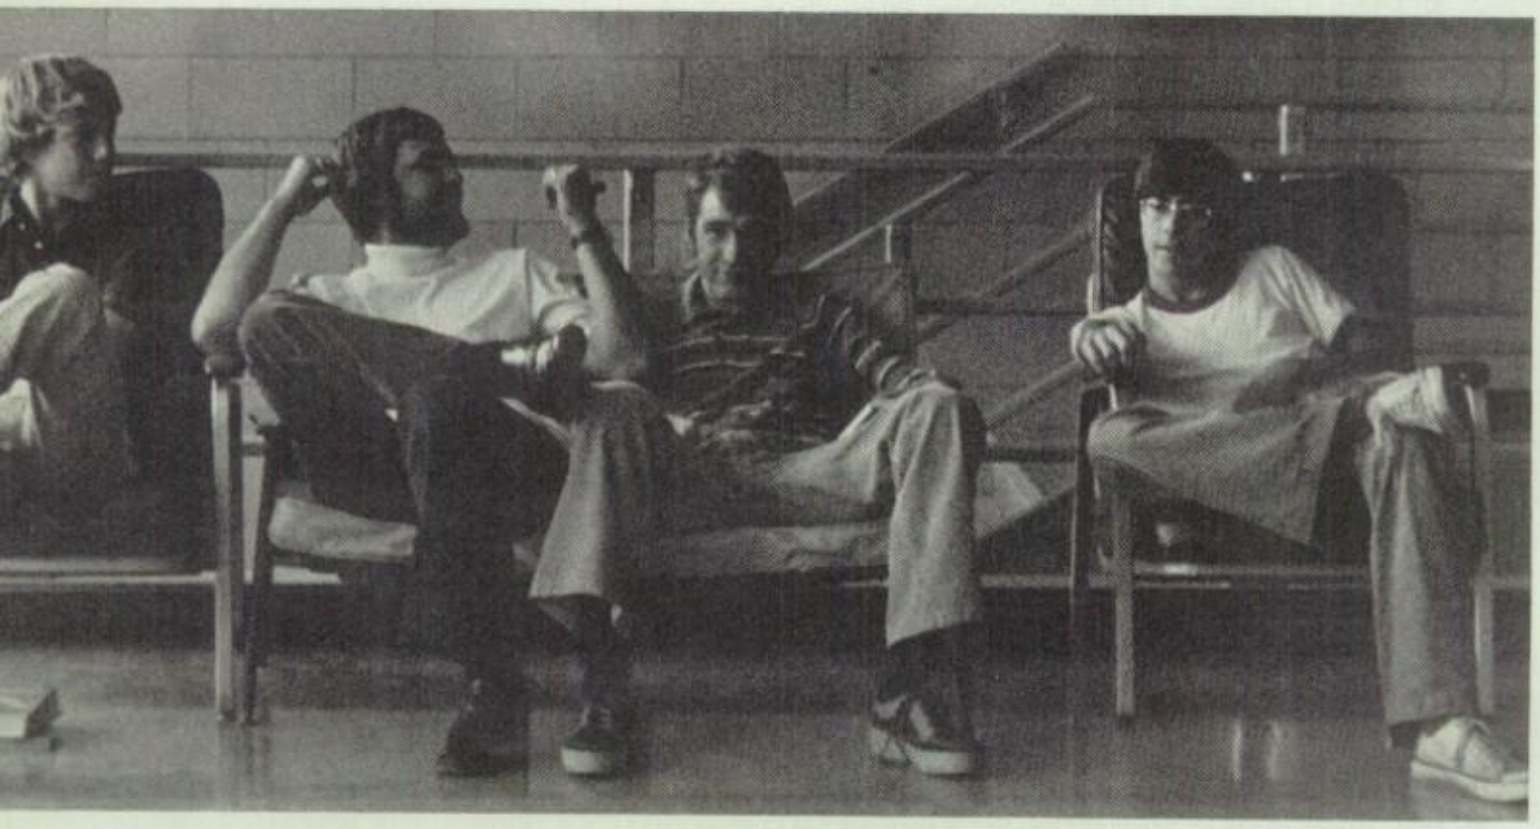
Bardstown, Kentucky

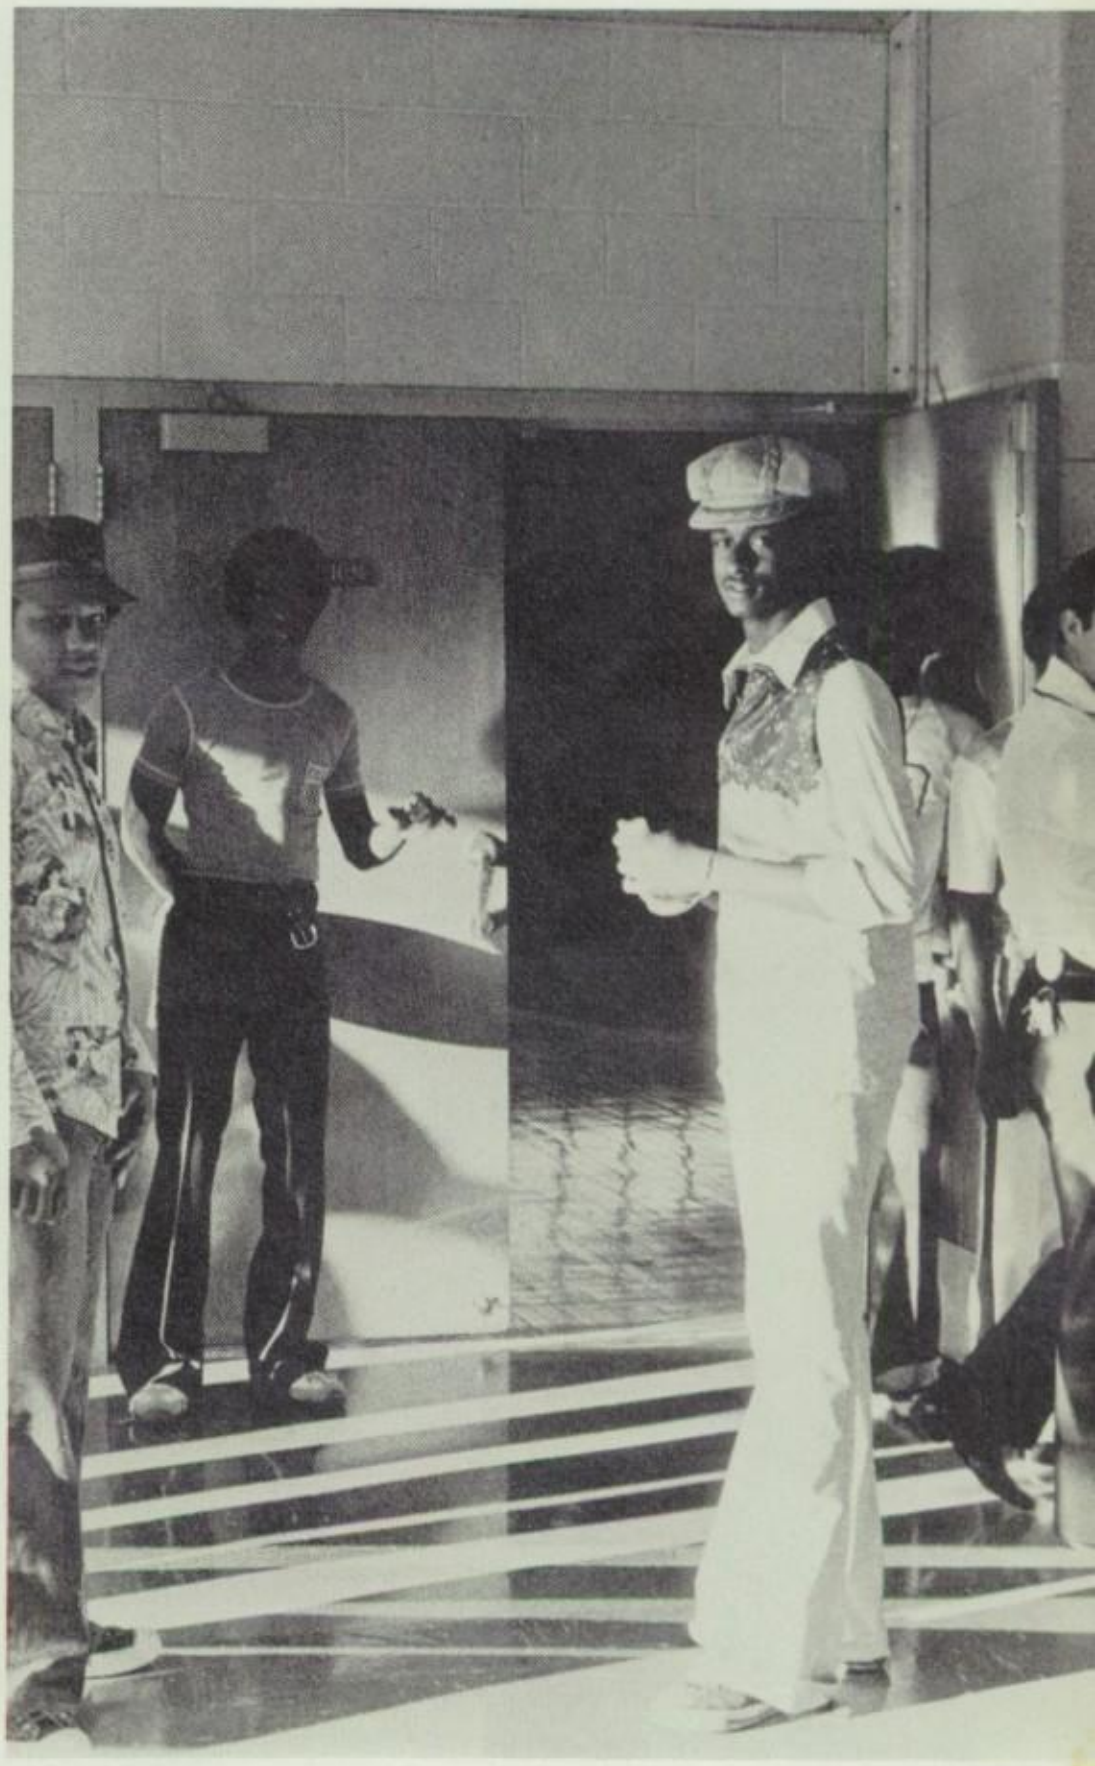


As high school students, we are old enough now that no one is protecting us; we can seriously consider the future that once seemed so far away. For four years we worked to make a home for ourselves here; we soon shall be forced to seek another niche, to accept a new pattern of life.

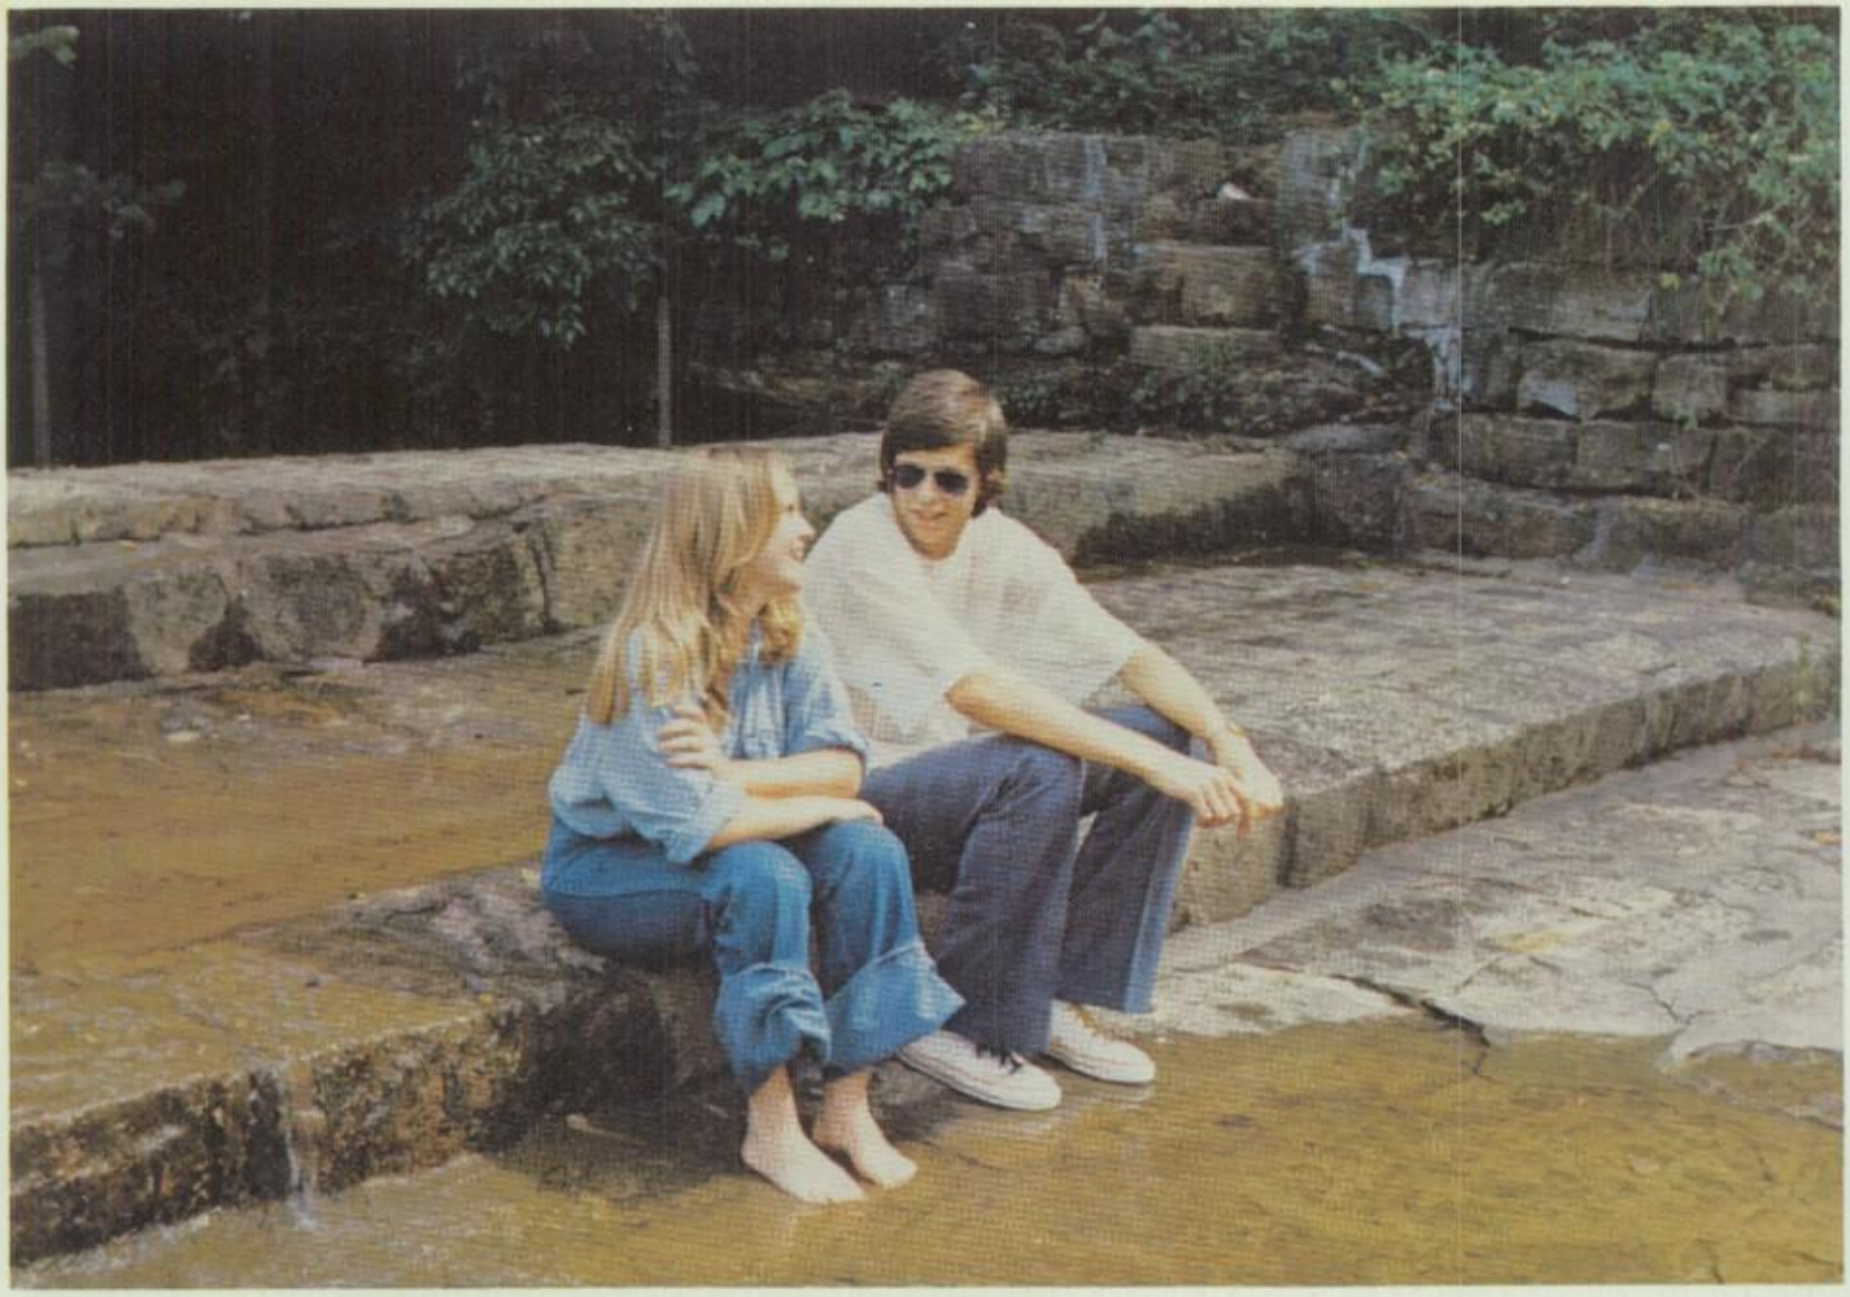
As freshmen, the high school years loomed over us, full of activities, homework, and friendships to come. We didn't concern ourselves then with what was to be afterwards; it wasn't important.

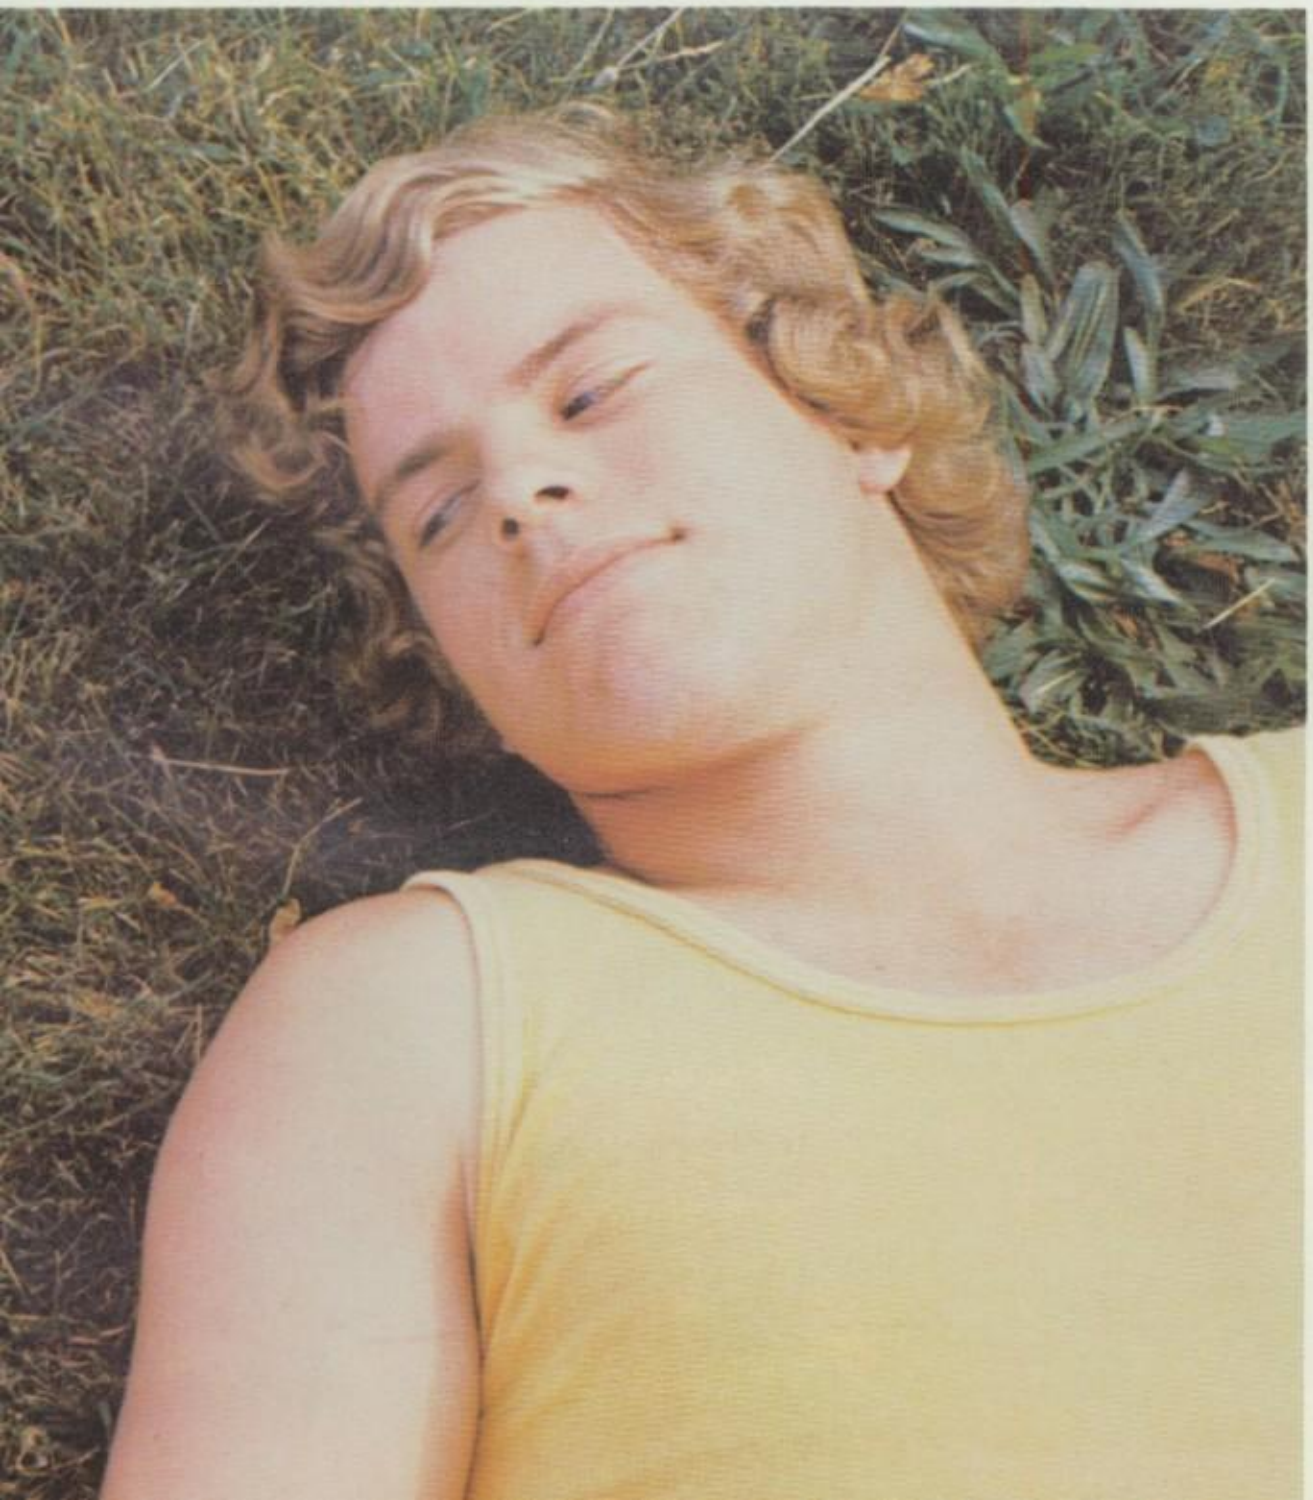
Adjusting to high school's mini-society is vastly different from learning to cope with the real world in which reason and responsibility are vital. High school years are an interim between the essential development of human experiences encountered in elementary school, and the rigorous, daily 9-5 adult schedule in which vital decisions are made or much physical labor completed . . .

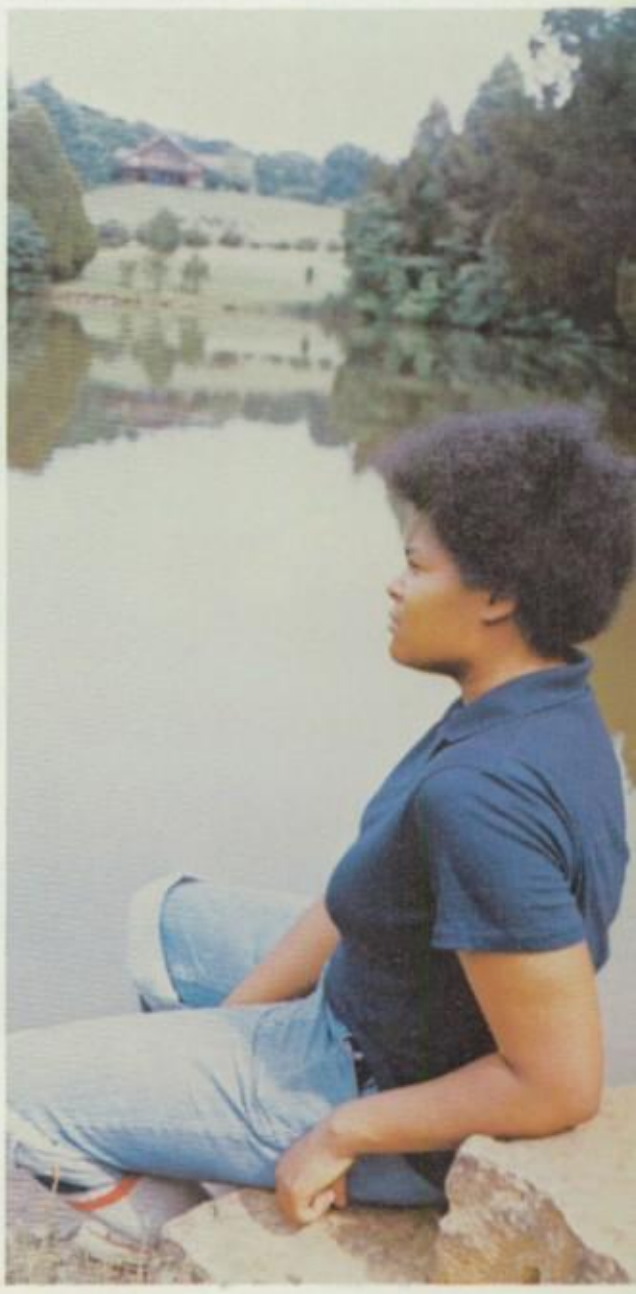




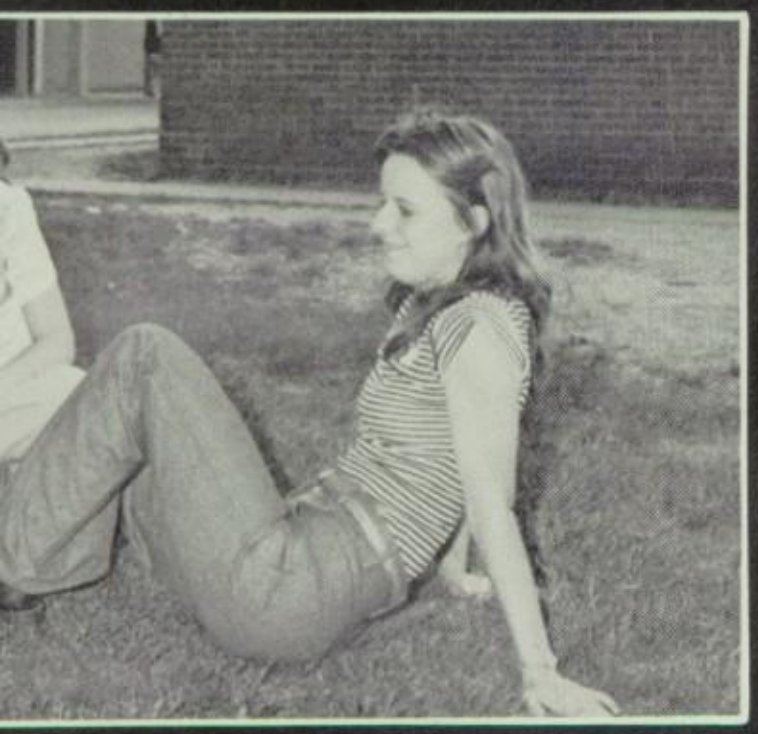
Life in this interim focuses for the first time on more concrete decision making, e.g. the pursuit of college preparatory or vocational training. Only when high school is completed do we launch into an enormous sea of decisions, which call for clear, important, and responsible thinking about life and what it will hold for us . . .







Four years of routine experiences do, however, contribute to a somewhat stagnant state of security. Very little seems to change; consequently the idea of expanding into new environments, new academic settings with more freedom, and possibly new working situations seems frightening and obscure . . .



The degree of preparedness is, for the most part, the key factor which will determine possible success while pursuing individual endeavors. A given student's background, both academic and extra-cirricular, helps to mold potential, and simultaneously, security.

Images are optical counterparts of persons or objects revealed through photographs, paintings, reliefs, mosaics, or sculpture which represent multitudinous facsimilies, reflections, likenesses, or conceptions of the individual's "inward eye." An image constitutes a concrete embodiment of that which flashes in the mind and dissipates instantly unless by some process it is contained or recreated. According to Plato, reality is composed of four levels—ideal goodness, forms, physical objects, and images, shadows and reflections. Images belong to the lowest level of reality. They depend on the more real for their existence.

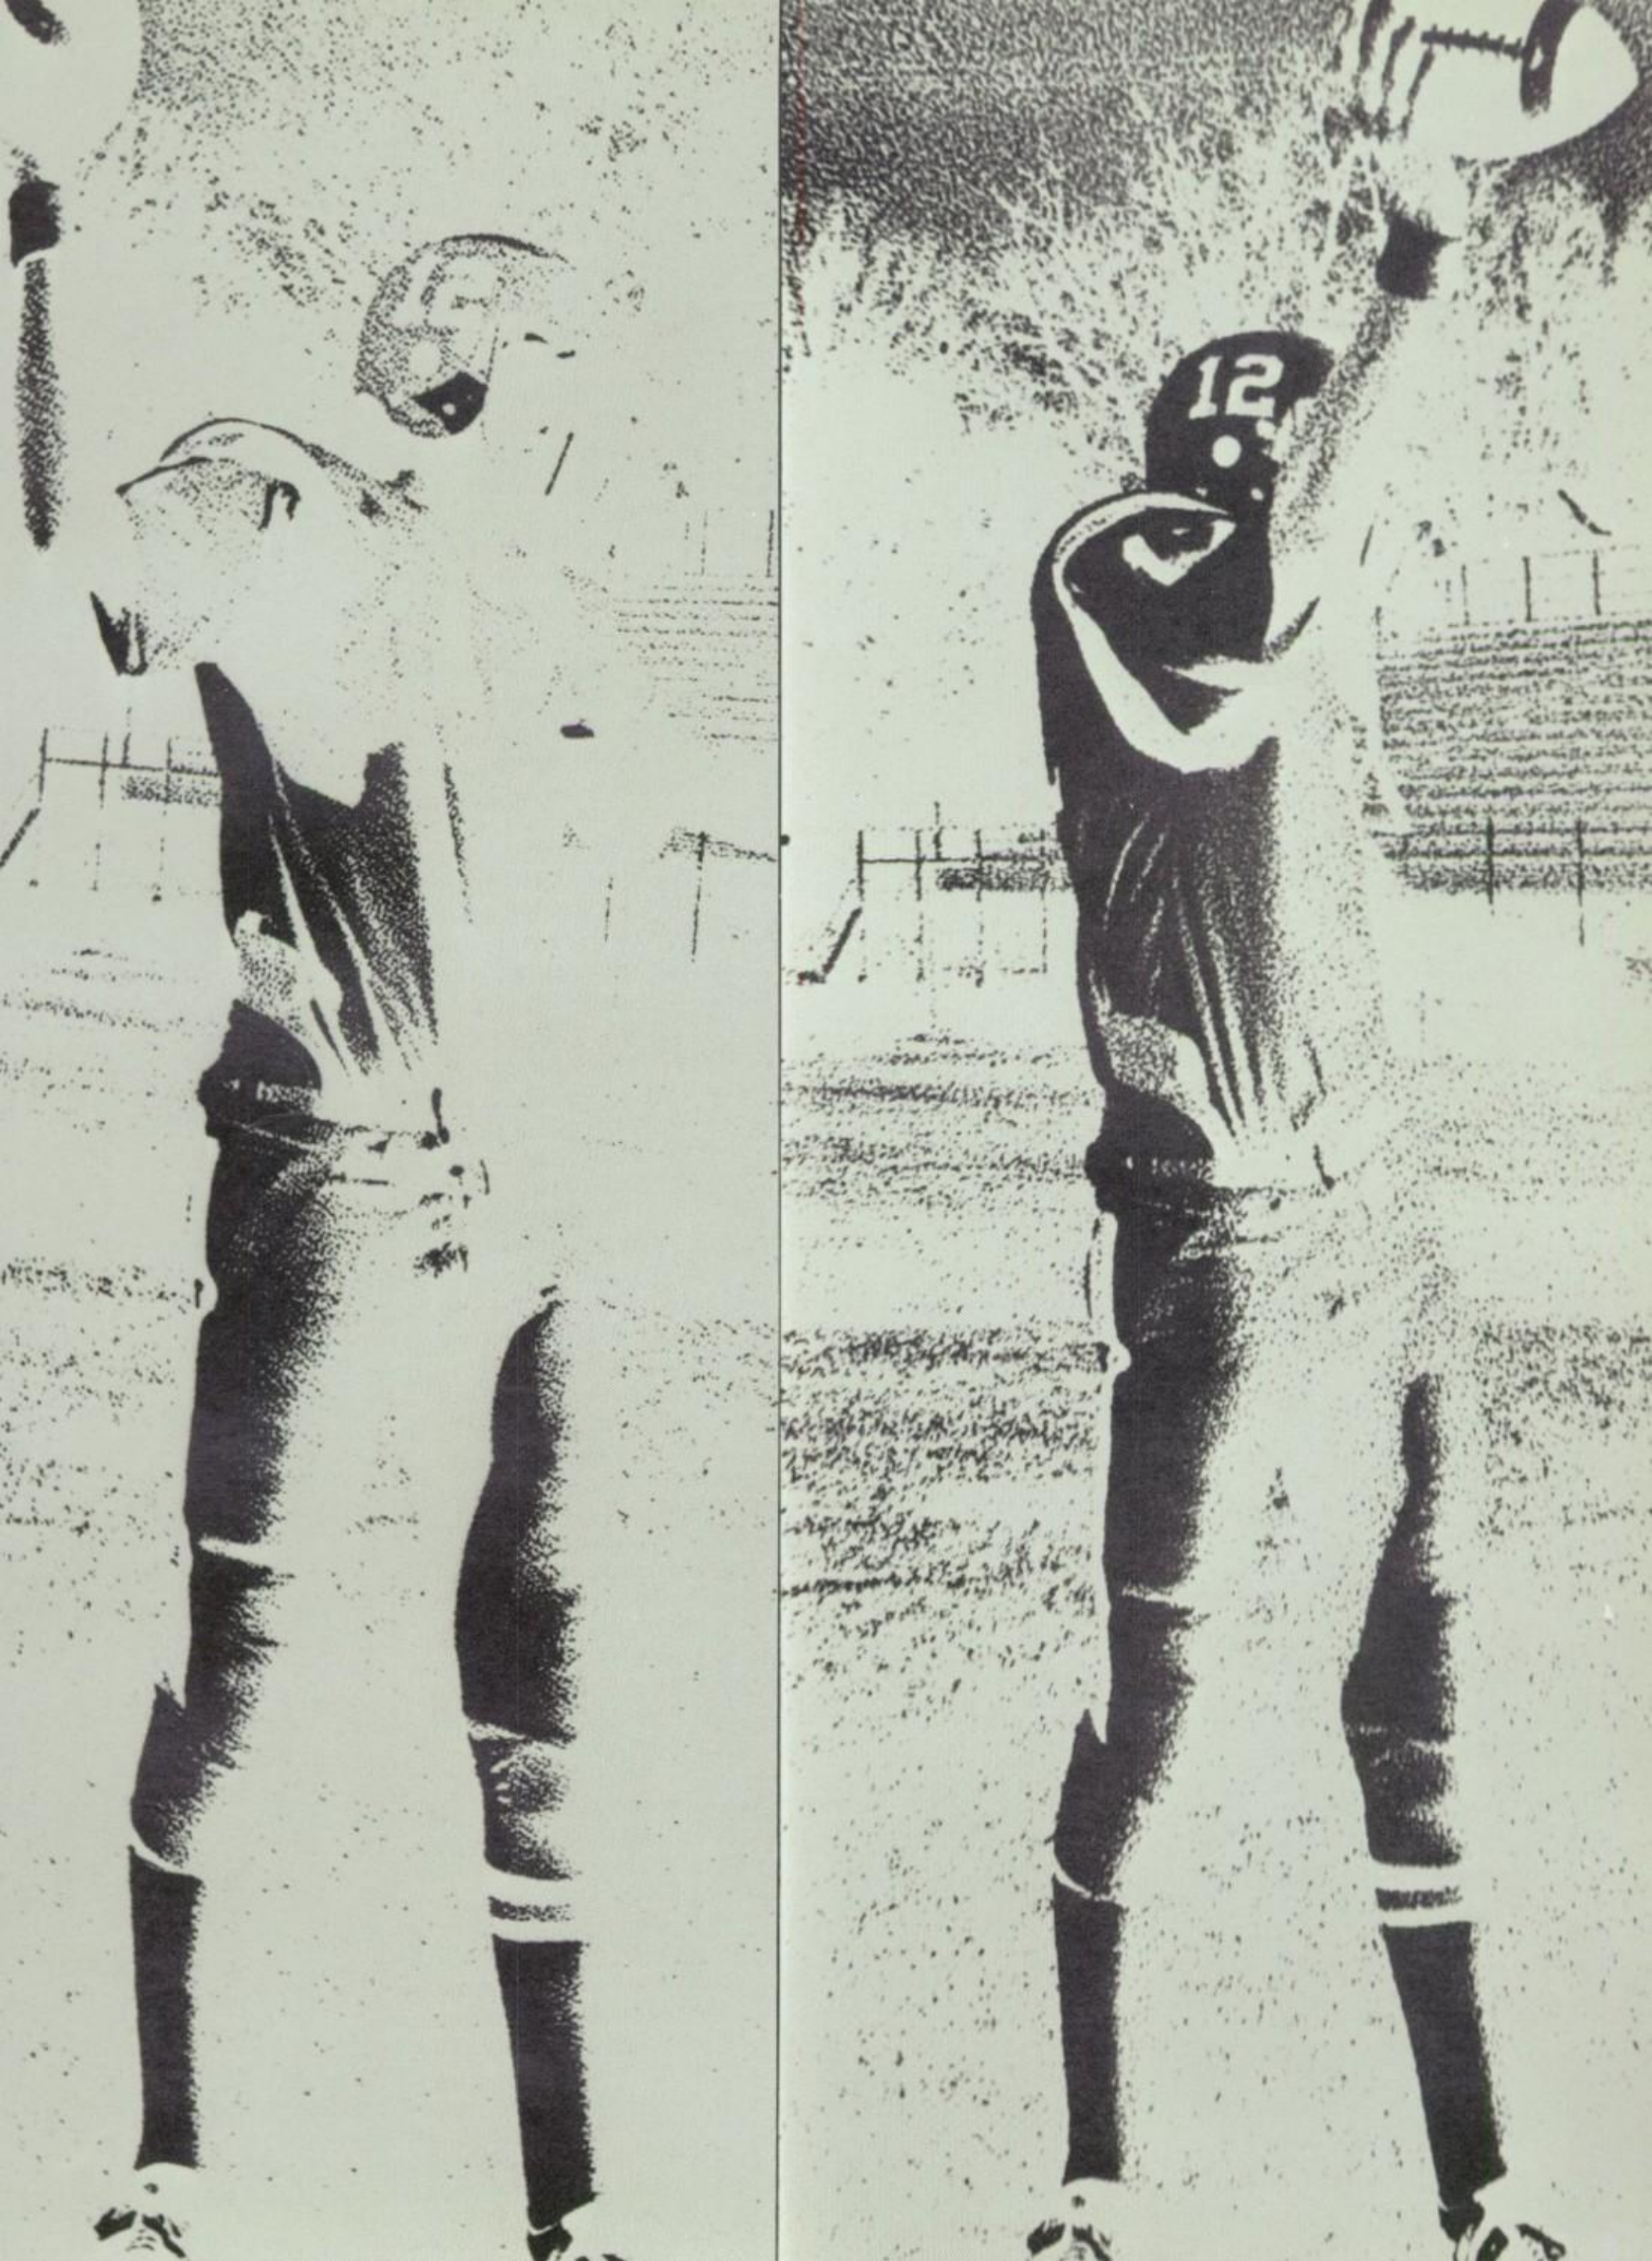
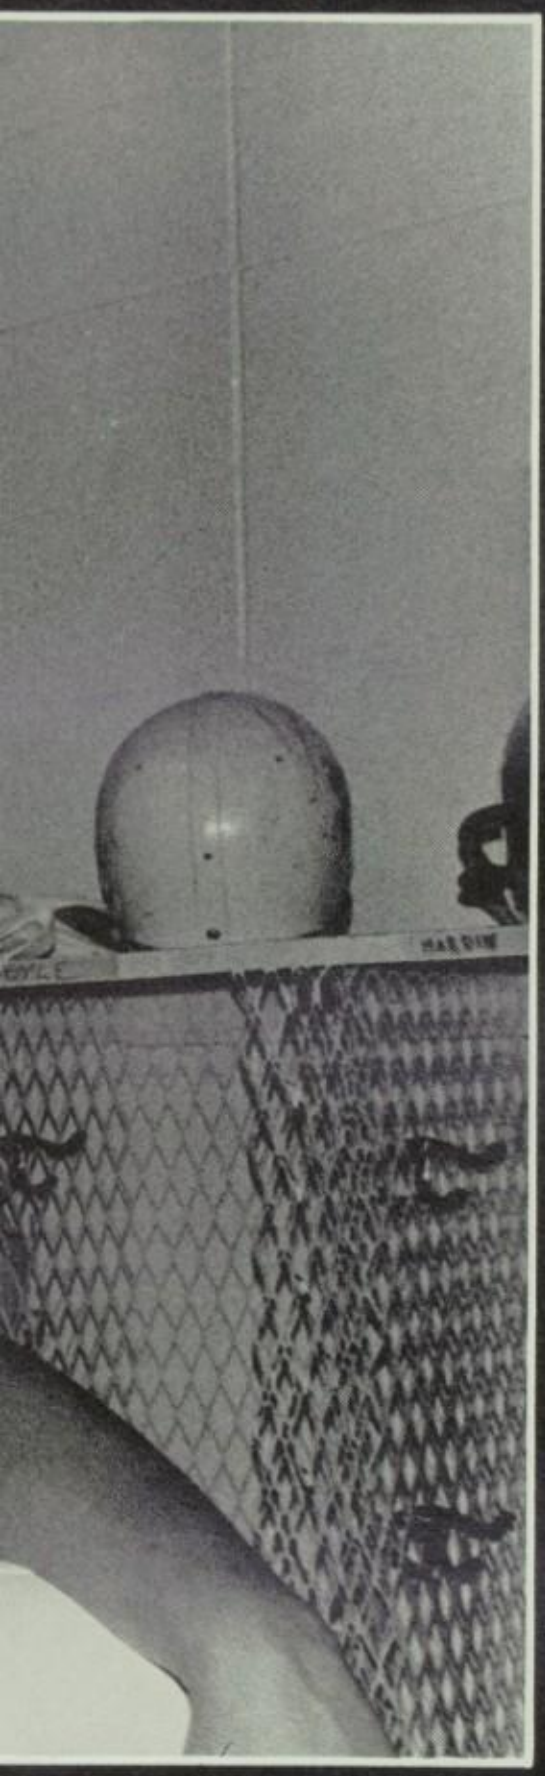
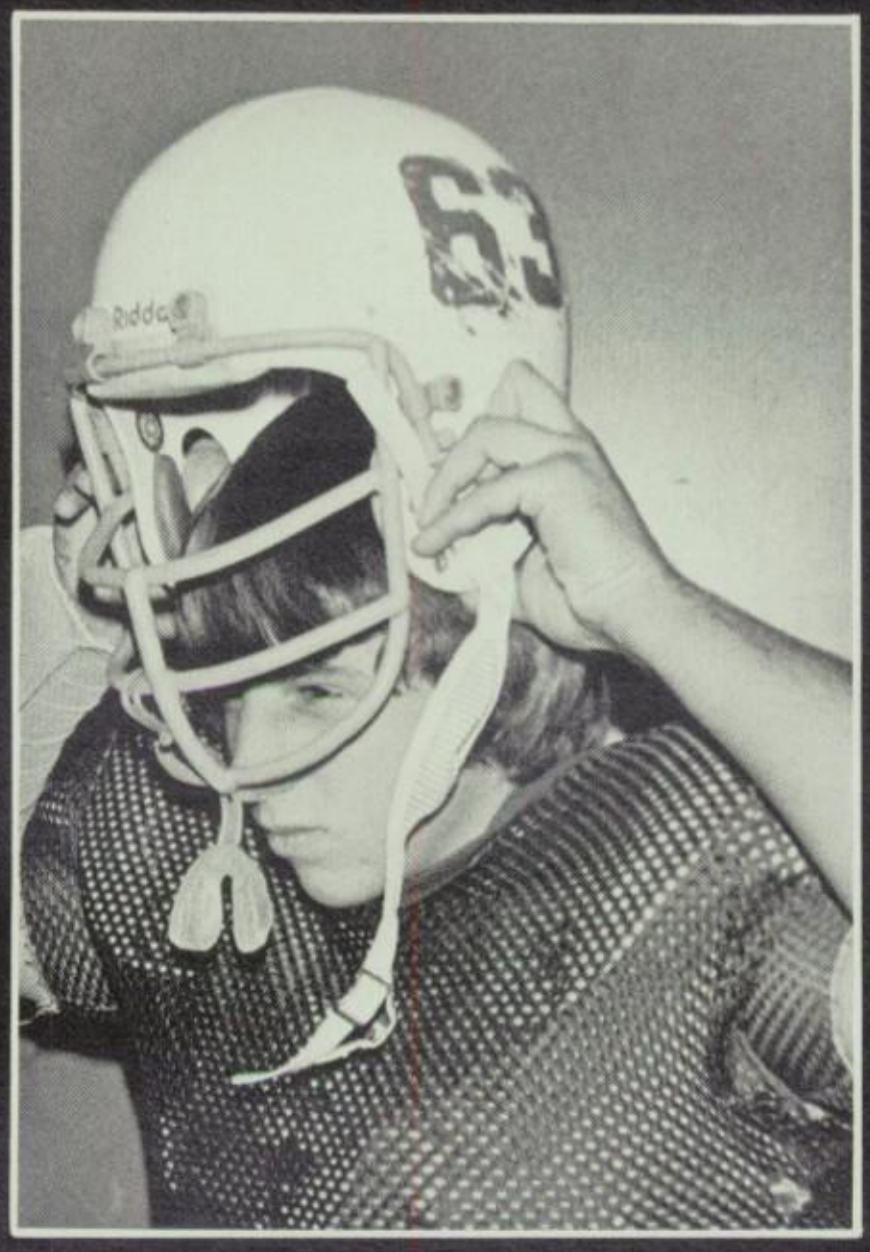
COMPETITION:



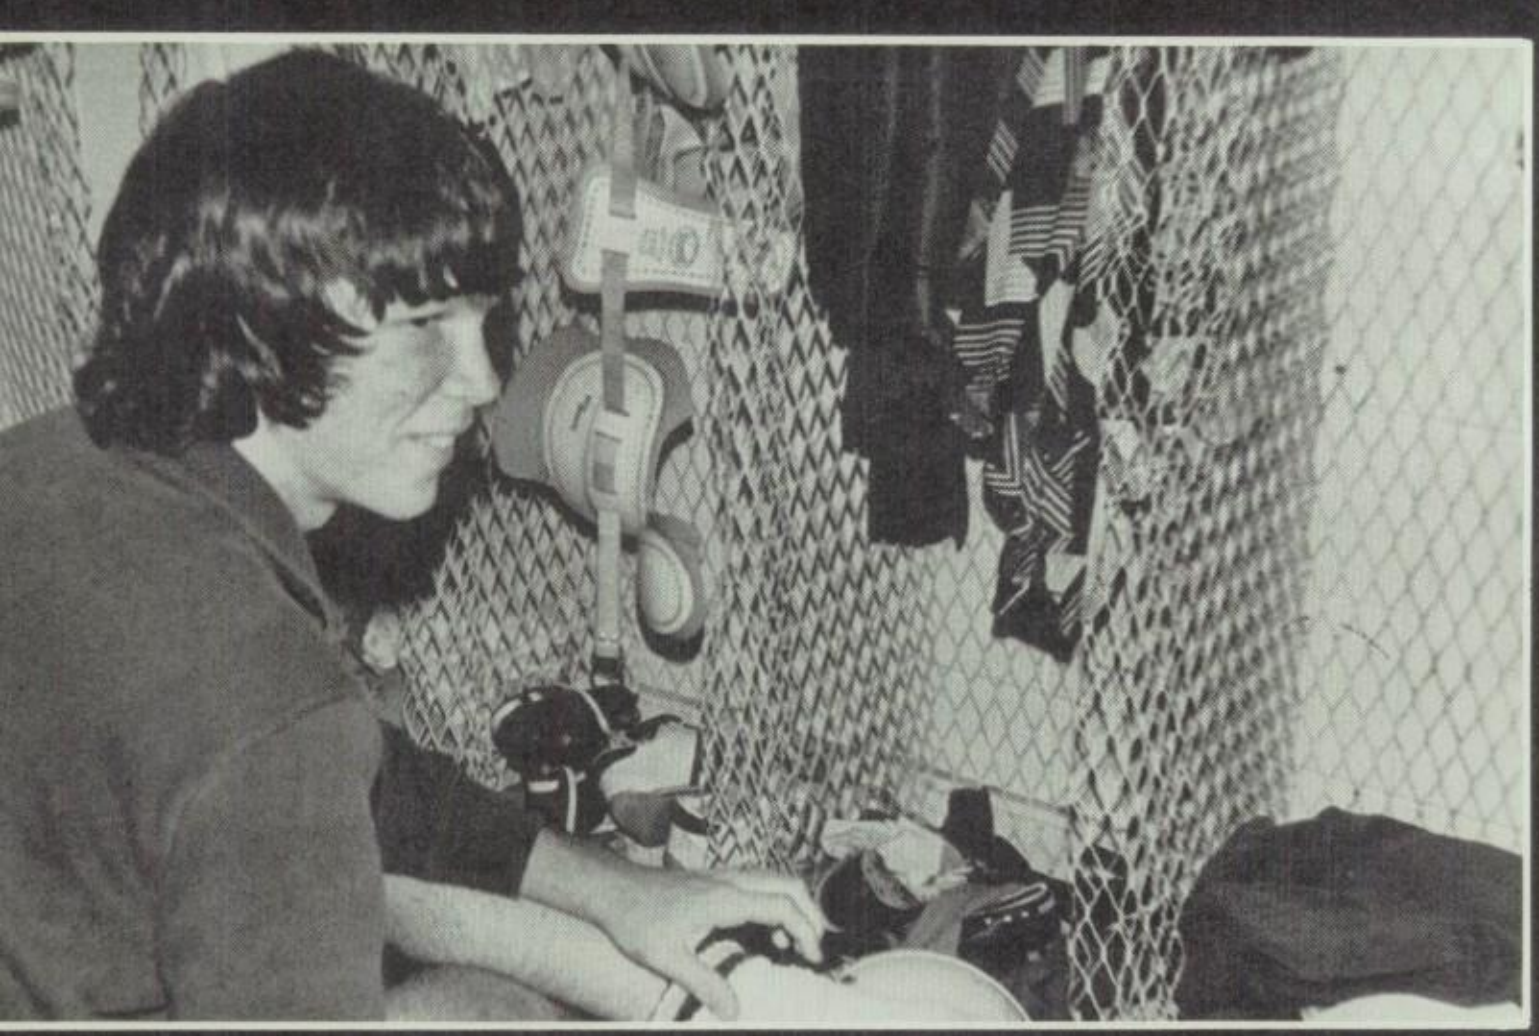


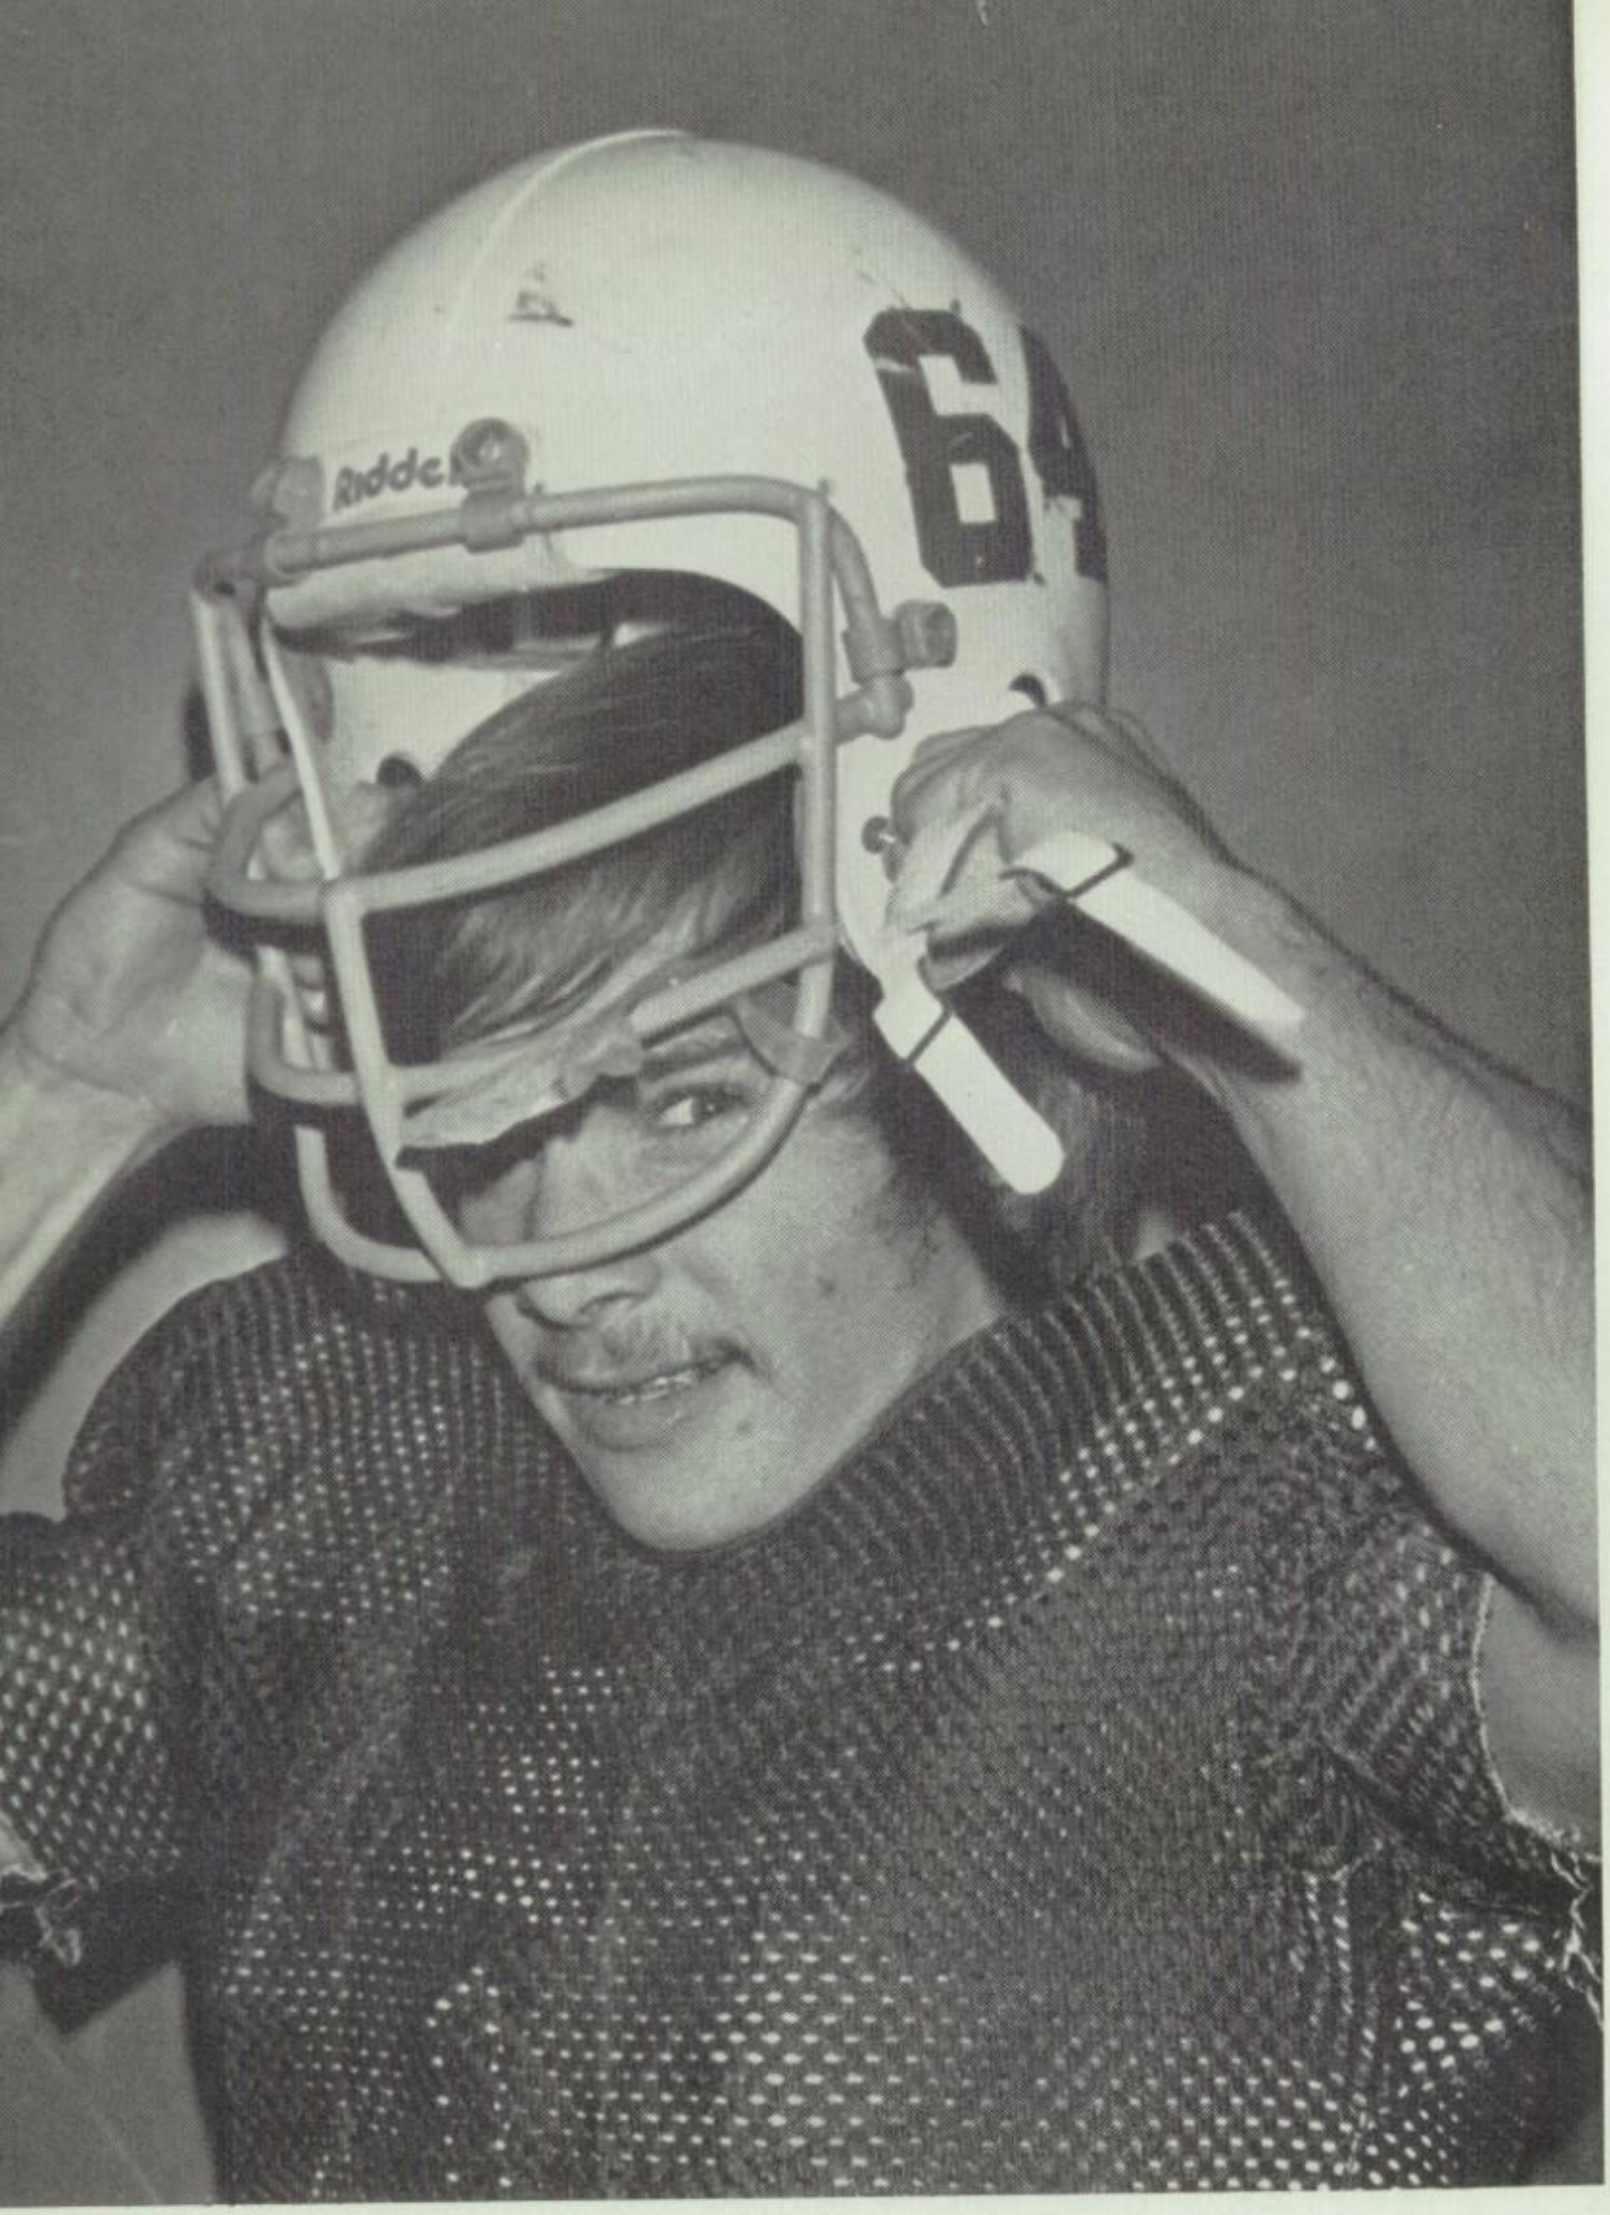


Football seasons are most always marked with excitement and emotion; this season was certainly no exception. As victory began to follow victory, it became evident that the '76 season held great possibilities for the Tigers.

For players, football experiences are most usually rewarding and are long remembered. A sense of unity develops as a season progresses and each player strives to do his best and the team collectively does the same.

Pride is an important characteristic in Bardstown High football. Past records have shown the school as one with much success; thus, pride carries over from team to team, year after year. Each new team strives to live up to the high standards of success the former teams have established.





Being in "the playoffs" is not such a rare thing for B.H.S.'s football teams; it is, however, one of the goals the team strives for, and one, when achieved, provides limitless excitement for players, and fans as well. The first playoff game was with Scott County, and was played on Scott County's field. Fans turned out in great number to watch, perhaps, the most exciting victory of the year. Next week came Mayfield to Bardstown's home field; the outcome proved to be less than what the Tigers wished for, but, nevertheless the team exhibited great effort in what was to be the final game of the season.

All-State honors for the '76 season went to Mark Etheredge and Greg Hickman. Also Coach Garnis Martin was given the honor as Class AA Coach of the year.

EDITOR'S NOTE

It is my wish that those who receive the 1976-77 yearbook will find some things which are to their liking and will take pleasure in seeing friends, or themselves as they attended or participated in the events of this year at Bardstown High School.

Capturing exciting and treasured moments and experiences is, of course the goal of a yearbook staff; it is, however, not always feasible, and consequently many of the great moments slip by uncaptured by the photographer's camera. On the other hand, we were able frequently, I think, to be "at the right place, at the right time" and to see significant school events and history in the making. Also, we were able to see those less significant, but nevertheless, meaningful daily, casual happenings both in classrooms and in extra-curricular activities.

Many hours of effort and dedication must be put forth by an entire yearbook staff if the final product is to be one which exemplifies satisfaction. If this is acquired, then pride is also a result derived from having succeeded in a long and worthwhile undertaking.

It is my opinion that this year's staff put forth a great deal of their time and ingenuity in producing the book and I hope they have found the experience satisfying and somewhat enjoyable.

The unorganized story that yearbooks attempt to tell may mean something only to students and faculty who find themselves betwixt its covers, but it is truly an accomplishment if such a book can provide interest and appeal to almost anyone. I hope that this book is as well-wrought as possible and appeals to many who read it.

So enjoy the book if you like. May it freshen memories and stir up some sentiment.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Rumbley
